

Martin Perry – Project Director

My title at the club is chief-executive, as well as being the project director for building the new stadium. It is my overall responsibility to make sure the American Express Community Stadium, or Amex Stadium as it will also be known, is delivered on time, as designed, and for the price we agreed with the constructors!

I also advise the club's board of directors on all matters relating to the new stadium; this started with the initial planning stage, through to the construction, and will end with the completion of the project.

Away from the club, I also work very closely with everyone else involved in the new stadium, including Brighton & Hove City Council, Brighton University, University of Sussex, and Falmer School.

I became involved in the project 14 years ago when I met with the old chairman, Dick Knight, and I have directed the project all the way through.
